What is the Traditional Government of the Nipmuc Nation?

The Constitution of the Nipmuc Nation, SECTION II Tribal Government, Part H, 1 defines the Traditional Government as:

“The Traditional Government of the Nipmuc Nation shall cultivate and perpetuate the customs, heritage, and religion of the Nipmuc Nation and shall include the current Hassanamisco Chief and an Elders Council whose members shall have attained sixty (60) years of age.”

The Traditional Government is in fact the continuation of the old Hassanamisco Tribal Council. One of our principal responsibilities is the stewardship of the Hassanamesit Reservation.

The Elders Council has an additional mission –

The Elders Council of the Nipmuc Nation shall cultivate and perpetuate our culture, history, and customs and encourage the harmony and unity of all of our People.

Any enrolled member of the Nipmuc Nation age 60 and over is welcome to serve on the Elders Council. The Elders meet on the 2nd Saturday of each month at 10 am except during the winter. There is a call-in line for those who cannot attend in person. Visitors are welcome at these meetings. Per the Elders Council Bylaws, there is a core group of 10 Elders with voting rights. Those members include (and can/do change):

Nellie Toney –Chair
Nancy Charleston – Treasurer
Gail Schuyler
Chief Walter Vickers
Sydney Schuyler
Ethel Toney
Muriel Geter
Valerie Wilson
Kenneth Hamilton, Sr
Denise Lewis
The current Chief or Sonksq (female leader) of the Nipmuc Nation and Hassanamisco Band is Cheryll Toney Holley.

Responsibilities of the Traditional Government

Below is the chart outlining the Traditional Government’s responsibilities.

What does the Traditional Government do all year?

As stated in the definitions above, the traditional government is responsible for the continuation of our culture. To that end, several programs and activities are sponsored by the traditional government. These activities are open to all Nipmucs regardless of enrollment status.

Powwow
The Nipmuc Nation Powwow (once known as the Hassanamisco Indian Fair) is held on the last Sunday in July at the reservation. It is open to the public, charges admission to all, and offers drumming, vendors, and dancing. This is the main fundraiser for the reservation.

Strawberry Moon
Held on the 3rd Saturday in June. This ceremony followed by a potluck social focuses on forgiveness. In 2018, we had a special forgiveness ceremony for Job Kattennit, an historic Nipmuc who served as an English scout during King Philip’s War.

Winter Social
This is a winter gathering focused on sharing our connections with each other. This winter it will be held in January and will include a potluck feast and storytelling.

Hassanamisco Indian Museum
The Museum building is still closed for renovation but activities continue on either the reservation or at the tribal office. School and scout visits are welcome. Each year a Native American Youth camp stays at the reservation. Visits to area schools have been suspended due to not enough volunteers. Language classes at the tribal office have been suspended but online classes are held once a month. When the Museum reopens, it will more accurately reflect Nipmuc history and culture throughout the years, have classroom space, and include visiting artists and instructors on a regular basis.
Reservation Improvements
The electricity on the grounds failed just before powwow this year. The underground wiring will be replaced in the spring. The damaged wetu was taken down and the fire pit beneath it is now the cooking area for events and camping. A microburst damaged the path put in last year by redirecting the brook down the middle of the path. A new path was cleared by the Agroecology Encounter led by Nipmucs Kristen Wyman and Nia Holley in September.

Nipmuc Indian Development Corporation (NIDC)
The traditional government re-activated the NIDC to serve as a vehicle for funding community development projects. All the work and programs created and sponsored this year were funded through the NIDC.

Food Sovereignty Programming
Many Nipmucs have family members that have diabetes and/or heart disease and many of our tribal members have died from these diseases. The NIDC, the Elders Council, the Women’s Group, and the Sonksq are working on ways to reduce these diseases in our community. One of the best ways to do this is to change what we eat. For the past four years, we have grown vegetables, berries, and herbs on the reservation, encouraged Nipmucs and their families to start food gardens at home, and taught medicine-making and plant identification.

Reservation Garden
The garden begun by the Women’s Group at the reservation did not do so well this year. Workers on the reservation accidentally mowed down the herbs, blueberry, and elderberry plants. At powwow this year, the corn was knocked down and destroyed by children in attendance. The goal of growing food at the reservation is to produce food from non-GMO seeds for distribution to elders and other Nipmuc families -- with the ultimate goal to change what we eat thereby reducing diabetes and heart disease in our community. The ground was cleared during the agroecology event in September and will be replanted next spring. We are looking for funding to add fencing around the site to prevent damage next year.

Home Gardens
Kristen Wyman and Nia Holley from Gedakina assisted Nipmuc families in establishing home gardens with the same goals for distributing food to Nipmuc families. The seeds were donated by the Sonksq.
Food Assessment
Funded by a grant through the First Nations Development Institute (FNDI), Nipmuc youth surveyed 200 Nipmuc families from all bands over nine months. The results of the assessment were distributed via email to those on the email list and presented publicly as shown below. The next step is to fine tune our food sovereignty goals. All Nipmucs are welcome to attend and contribute to these meetings.

Youth Cohort
Nippeash Waapemooash is a tribal civics/rites of passage initiative to address the unique challenges Nipmuc youth experience and to promote a positive sense of self-worth and cultural pride within the tribe. Through this program, our youth are developing skills and values relating to histories, traditional arts, farming, and tribal government/civics that will one day assist these young people in leading our future.
The program began this past June and already the youth have impressed our leadership and elders with their thoughtful questions and answers, imaginative approaches to difficult issues, and the older children’s guidance of younger members of the cohort.
Women's Group
Squaognipmug Waantook Society is a group of Nipmuc women from different bands and non-bands who meet once a month to talk, share, and work on crafts and other projects. Occasional field trips included! We also practice ceremony at the reservation. Below are photos from a hand drum making session and a moccasin workshop.

Homestead Restoration
Rae Gould is leading this effort to restore the 1801 Homestead on the reservation. Once restored, it will re-open as a Museum. The exterior is now finished and the focus has shifted to plans for the completion of the interior.

Tribal Historic Preservation Office
Rae Gould, David White, and Cheryll Holley monitor federally funded construction that may have an impact on historic or sacred Nipmuc landscapes. We also re-inter remains returned to the tribe by Museums, historical societies, and other tribes. We are now working to reinter individuals from Millbury, Wayland, and Worcester in our own homelands.

Websites
The Hassanamisco Indian Museum website is www.nipmucmuseum.org.
The Nipmuc Indian Development Corporation website is www.nippi.org.

Reservation Extension
We are currently negotiating for the return of land to the reservation. The land will be used to practice stewardship of the land, invigorate our paddling activities and for ceremonial space.
